

Energy and Natural Resources

Fowler White Boggs's Environmental Group constructs multi-disciplinary teams of attorneys from various practice areas within the Firm to provide integrated legal services to energy companies, utilities, government entities and property owners. Our Environmental lawyers handle a wide variety of legal issues throughout the state of Florida that center upon Energy and Natural Resources. Fowler White has formed strong strategic alliances with consulting partners, environmental engineers and consultants, regulatory agencies and other permitting authorities to assist our clients within the Energy and Natural Resources fields. Not only does our multi-disciplinary project approach address Intellectual Property law, capital transactions, state and federal tax and regulatory issues, but our approach also places a great deal of emphasis on project management issues, which include real estate issues, land use and zoning needs, land use and regulatory entitlements and complex environmental permitting. Our Energy and Natural Resources attorneys also work closely with the Firm's lobbyists to provide governmental advocacy services at the federal, state and local levels.
