

Colleges and Universities

Colleges and Universities are a large segment of our economy and our communities. Fowler White Boggs attorneys serve in a variety of capacities on behalf of schools, colleges, and universities including on their boards of trustees. For example, Rhea F. Law is Chair of the Board of Trustees of the University of South Florida. James T. Humphrey is on the Edison Community College Foundation Board and serves on the Board of Trustees of Hodges University. These are just a few examples of our lawyers' commitment to serving the colleges and universities in our communities.

The lawyers on the Colleges and Universities Industry Team offer a comprehensive range of services to this business segment. Our corporate and tax lawyers assist in structuring the entities in the most favorable form; our immigration lawyers work with the universities to attract and retain students and faculty to the institutions; our employment lawyers work closely with the schools to establish good employment practices; and our intellectual property lawyers work to protect and transfer technology for the institutions. These are only a few of the services our Colleges and Universities Industry Team performs for these organizations.
